Epitaph for Sir D----y R---r, Kn--t.

Here
reſts at laſt,
from all his ſanguinary Deſires, Sir D----y R---r, Kn---t; whoſe Love of Money
was only exceeded
by his Luſt of Puniſhment; form'd by Nature for all the Chicanery of the Law,
improved by the double
and deceitful Education of a
Preſbyterian.
By unwaried Application
to his own Intereſt, by proſtituting his Conſcience,
and
a true Time-ſerving Spirit in ſpite of Genius,
from the baſeſt Original, he acquired the immenſe Sum of Three hundred thouſand Pounds;
and wriggled himſelf into the Poſt of Att---y G----l.
In the Execution of this Office,
his Heart conſtantly felt Affliction, his Eye ever flow'd with Sorrow when the Innocent eſcaped unpuniſh'd.
Hence, by ſlaviſh Obedience to M----l Mandates,
In wreſting Laws to arbitrary Purpoſes
he aſcended the Seat
of
Lord C---f J----e.
The ſame Thirſt of Vengeance ſtill waited on his Footſteps; thoſe whom he long'd to puniſh
as Att---y,
he now condemn'd
with Delight
as Judge;
Truth found no Juſtice,
Virtue no Favour,
Innocence no Mercy,
when in Oppoſition to C---t Meaſures;
zealous to eſtabliſh Tyranny in the Crown Law
againſt all but * Robbers of the Publick Money,
to whom, from Sympathy,
He was merciful beyond Meaſure;
Enemy to Liberty,
ſteady in his Country's Ruin, encouraged and adapted by all the Qualities in Head and Heart which diſgrace human Nature to requeſt Nobility,
he aſk'd,
and it was granted.
Heaven and Monarchs
behold, with different Eyes, him, whom his S---n ſummoned to a Peerage,
God ſnatch'd to anſwer for his Crimes;
for know, the Almighty will not always, unrelenting,
permit the Ambitious to receive,
nor Kings to beſtow thoſe Honours on the Nefarious,
which are only the juſt Reward
VIRTUE.

* Vide Sa---'s Trial, where after being found guilty of illegally poſſeſſing Twenty thouſand Pounds, he was only fined the Intereſt of that Money ſince he had it in his Hands, ſtill preſerving all his Places but one.
